

When I turn on the local evening news, I want to see stories that tell me about my community. I want to see informative stories that give me better insight into my schools and my local politics. I want to see journalists with integrity ask the tough questions.

Local television stations these days are owned by huge national corporations who use our public airwaves to make money, not to tell me what I need to know.

I am disappointed in Sinclair Networks' decision to air an anti-Kerry documentary in the weeks prior to the presidential election. This kind of biased "journalism" that appears on public airwaves does not help Americans make informed, logical decisions about our country's leadership. Please keep our journalists, and American democracy, fair, by insisting that media presented as fact is just that, fair, unbiased, and factual.
